

MORNING APPEAL.

Saturday, October 9 1898

A TRAITOR IN THE CAMP.

No newspaper editor in this State has received more of the compliments and honors of the Republican party than C. C. Powning of the Reno Journal. He has been elected twice to the State Senate, given the lucrative office of U. S. Surveyor General and nominated for Congress on the Republican ticket. In addition to this he has been allowed to control nearly all the patronage of the State Prison, State University and Lunatic Asylum.

The APPEAL has always been of the opinion that Mr. Powning has received more from the party than he has been fairly entitled to, as his services for the party have not been great and his zeal in working for it was always the most pronounced where his own personal interest was involved.

Recently his ticket in Washoe was defeated and since that time he has retired into his tent to sulk.

Contrast this course with that pursued by the Reno Gazette. Its proprietor Mr. Fulton has never received any party honors or emoluments, yet his paper has always made a telling fight for the ticket and always been in the thick of the fray during a campaign.

It has done more for the party than the Reno Journal and asked nothing in return. Yet when Mr. Powning fails to get what he wants in politics he refuses to work any longer for the party and preserves a course at once unmanly and un-Republican to the last degree.

Since the nominations at the State Convention he has had as little as possible to say regarding the ticket, and every little fling at the party that he can find floating through the columns of Democratic or Mugwump papers he copies and gives prominence in his paper. Mr. Powning's Republicanism seems to be the kind that ceases the moment he cannot have his own way. He is everlastingly clamoring for party pap and like a spoiled child howls for everything in sight and if it is not immediately placed in his hands, fills the State with noise and keep up his cries until he is pacified. Now this policy of pacifying the kickers and squealers by giving them everything they call for, is played out in the Republican party.

We submit that Mr. Powning has already been given all the honors and emoluments that he is reasonably entitled to, and for that matter a good deal more. His political maw is insatiable. He wants the State on a silver platter and if he don't get it proposes to smash things generally.

He fastened his ambition on Congressional honors and was given the nomination. He had a square show before the people of this State and was heavily snowed under. Then he came to the front and demanded the United States Senatorship, and on what grounds do you suppose? On the grounds that he had been beaten for Congress! He seemed to labor under the impression that when a majority of the people voted for Cassidy they said to themselves:

"This Mr. Powning is too able a man to send to Congress. If we send him to Congress he will be lost there, and prevented from reaching the Senate, where he properly belongs. Therefore we will save him for something better," etc.

This is the way Powning regards his defeat. He has boasted too much of carrying his county in his vest pocket, when, as a matter of fact he never won a trick in Washoe when a fight was made against him. His course has been such during the last few months that he is looked upon as a confederate of Fair, who is supposed to keep him in office. He is now doing more work for Fair than anybody in Nevada. Will any honest minded man say he is not a traitor in the camp? His partisanship is purely of a personal character, and he needs regulating and disciplining. He needs to be taught his place in the party, and also instructed relative to the proper method of keeping it.

The only amends he can make now is to wheel in line and help fight for the ticket. He should quit loafing round the Commissary Department and Hospital, and go to the front.
